Judge Arthur L. Brown, sitting in the United States district court at Providence, has given an important opinion relating to the status of a petit juror in the federal court whose qualifications are questioned because of his having served in a similar capacity in a state court, after a verdict had been rendered by the jury upon which he served in the state tribunal. The judge rules that the contention that service as a petit juror in the state court works as a disqualification to serve in the federal court. tion to serve in the federal court is unsound, and that the party having had an opportunity to challenge and not having exercises the right in this respect, no disqualification of a juror entitles him to a new trial after the Motorcyclist Killed.

George W. Haskell was instantly killed by being thrown from his motorcycle when near the Wequetequock casino, Friday morning at about 9.30. He was riding from Westerly towards Stonington, when the motorcycle skidded on the ice-coated highway and he was thrown headforemest against the iron rail of the trolley road, sustaining a fracture of the skull and a broken neck. Just after the fatality John McArdle of New London, operating a small motor truck, came along and struck something, but just what he did not know at the time. He stopped and investigated. His machine had struck the motorcycle that was lying in the road, well to the right and on the opposite side of the road and on the opposite side of the road was the dead body of Haskell with his head close to the rail. At first McArdle thought he had struck the motorcycle before the fatality, but this was impossible, as the relative positions of the body and the motorcycle tions of the body and the motorcycle clearly demonstrated. Mr. Haskell was in Westerly early in the morning and called at a local repair shop to have some slight repairs made to his motorcycle, as he intended to go to Providence. Owing to the key condition of the highways he deferred the trip and concluded to return to his home in Stonington. Dr. George D. Stanton, after an investigation decided that Stonington. Dr. George D. Stanton, after an investigation, decided that death was due to accident and he permitted the body to be removed.

George W. Haskell was 21 years of age, the son of Mr. and Mrs. Edward Haskell and lived with his parents on the Charles P. Williams estate in Stonington. Besides his parents he is survived by two sisters and two brothers.
